the College Boys' Third Baseman Works Their Defeat-Fine Work by the Pitchers.

n the College Spiders had played eight men against the Farmers yesterday after hood, and allowed Ellyson to fill both th positions of left field and third base, they might possibly have given the Agriculturate a terrible fight, but they didn't do this, and so it is the same old story. A gentleman named "Bender" covered the third bag for the Tarantulas. The mere mention of his name tells the story. Every boly who knocks about town knows what pender" is. The Collegians are all in-ent little fellows, but they had their nder" yesterday and they paid the naty. Yes, Caesar had his Brutus, Charles the First his Oromwell—and Kien mond College their third baseman. Poo Mr. hender,—nobody has anything to say Mr. hender,—nobody has anything to say Mr. baseball against him personally—but on a baseball against him personal his name is Mud. His errors came just when the other team wanted

This settled the whole affect.
So William Quaries, the prodigy of the Qockade City, tossed for the rarmers, and mighty tricky ball he pitched, too. He held the slugging Tarantulas down to four postering hits and fanged out eleven bats-men. He was quite wild, however, but

mes. He was quite wind, however, but sim his good work in other respects al-howed him plenty of margin for that. Anthony pitched wonderful ball in every mining save the seventh, and no wonder he has head then, for the Spiders were the worst "nimnammed" chaps one ever The Agriculturalists played a good all

The Agriculturalists played a good all 'round game, and the Feteraburg' cranks' who saw the contest were undoubtedly avish in their applicate for the Farmers. There is no question about that, and then, too, it is not so much the noise that the Cockade City enthusiasts made as it is "the way they do it." Why: Lord Chesterfield would kick himself if he tried to you with them in "Footing." The with them in "rooting."

The connection of simple jaundice with sudden mental emotion is generally admitted. Such facts as the following are not uncommon: A young woman becomes yellow at the discovery of her misdeeds; another on hearing that her fiance was killed; a young man on being discharged from office because he had not grown tall enough.

Simple jaundice is often followed by acute yellow atrophy, which is also known to be directly caused by shock. In this form of jaundice there is always disorganization of the liver cells. Even cancer may have a like origin.-Ex-

SPICED PEACHES.—These are also called 'sweet pickle' paeches. Allow for every pound of peaches—which are better if a little hard—three-quarters of a pound of brown sugar, one tablespoonful of whole cloves, one half tablespoonful of mace and a half pint of water. Stick three or four whole cloves into each peach, then make the sugar into syrup, add the spice, put in the peaches and cook until soft. Remove the peaches, add a pint of vinegar, let the syrup cook ten or fifteen minutes longer and pour over the peaches. Some persons prefer to have them less sweet, and use only a half pound of sugar, which, with the vinegar, issufficient to keep them. Southern housekeepers always recommend th cling-ston peach for sweet pickles, as they keep their shape better than the freestones.
